

A Friend Till The End

By J.M.

Once upon a time in a forest far, far away, there was a bear called Charlie. He had a best friend called Wilson. They grew up together and shared lots of funny and sad moments. They were always there for each other and loved each other endlessly.

One day they were walking through the forest singing songs and giggling. They came across a shelter filled with different types of food. Charlie started jumping around saying he was happy he had found it and he couldn't wait to share the news about his discovery with other bears. Wilson became angry because they found it together but Charlie took all the credits.

When they came back home, Charlie became friends with lots of other bears and they loved him for his discovery. He liked the attention and he forgot about betraying his friend Wilson.

When Charlie came back to the forest to get some honey from the shelter to hand out to his new friends, he found out the shelter was robbed.

He came back home, told his new friends and they abandoned him because he wasn't useful for them anymore. Charlie was very sad and he regretted taking credit for everything. He came to Wilson and apologised. Wilson forgave him and told him:

“I will be the friend till the end for you. I loved you even before you got the food. Don't think that will ever change.”

The bears figured out the importance and the value of their friendship and lived happily ever after.
