

The Fox and the Pup

By S.S.

Not so long ago, there was a big farm near the forest. A small and playful pup lived on the farm. One day, the pup was playing and got too close to the forest. Suddenly, he heard someone crying. He went in the forest and saw a fox.

“Why are you crying?” the pup asked.

“My family left and now I’m all alone,” the fox replied.

The pup felt sorry for the fox and asked her to come to the farm. The fox was happy and accepted the offer. She got used to life on the farm, but after some time she changed, she started showing her real face. The fox ate other animal’s food, slept in the pup’s place. One morning, a half of the chickens were killed. Pup’s father, the dog, asked animals who did it.

Everyone suspected it was the fox who did it because she was known for loving chicken meat and doing bad things, but the fox immediately blamed the cats. The dog pretended to believe her, but he knew she was lying. The animals didn’t want to live with the fox anymore.

They decided to get rid of her, but first to teach her a lesson. One night, animals pretended to be a huge, scary monster. The fox was so scared she run away far, far from the farm and never came back.

The pup learned not to be so naive and not to trust every animal he meets. The fox learned that if you do bad things to others, bad things will eventually happen to you. It’s karma.
